- Roles supporting digitisation of collections and records

Demand

- The sector remains relatively stable rather than high growth
- Demand supported by tourism, community regeneration and cultural participation
- Digital transformation is creating new skill requirements
- Funding pressures can affect staffing levels
- Future opportunities through cultural tourism, heritage-led regeneration and digital access

GREEN SKILLS & SUSTAINABILITY

While direct green job opportunities are limited, sustainability is increasingly important through:

- Preservation and reuse of historic buildings
- Sustainable tourism initiatives
- Energy-efficient operation of cultural venues
- Conservation and environmental heritage projects
- Community education linked to sustainability and local heritage

A greener future for our heritage

1 INDUSTRY OVERVIEW

The education and training sector remains an important part of the Falkirk labour market, supporting employment across schools, colleges, work-based learning, employability programmes and skills development services.

53,000+
school teachers
employed in Scotland

One of Scotland's larger employment
sectors

Locally, the sector benefits from strong links with schools, Forth Valley College, Skills Development Scotland, apprenticeship providers and employability programmes supporting young people and adults into learning and work.

2 SKILLS IN DEMAND

Employers are looking for transferable, people-focused skills, alongside digital capability.

Self-management skills

Communication skills

Teamworking

Leadership and management

Problem solving

Digital and technology skills

Customer and stakeholder engagement skills

Self-management skills were identified as the most common area requiring upskilling by employers, followed by leadership/management and teamworking skills.

3 LOCAL JOB OPPORTUNITIES

Typical vacancies in Falkirk include:

Primary and secondary teachers

Additional support needs staff

Early years practitioners

Learning assistants

Employability advisers

Training officers

Skills coaches

Assessors and verifiers

Lecturer roles

Careers advisers

KEY EMPLOYERS
INCLUDE:

- Falkirk Council
- Forth Valley College
- Skills Development Scotland
- Private training providers
- Third-sector employability organisations
- NHS education and training departments

4 EMERGING ROLES & FUTURE TRENDS

The sector is adapting to changing technology, workforce needs and sustainability priorities.

Increased use of digital learning platforms

Hybrid and online delivery models

AI-enhanced learning support

Greater emphasis on career management skills

Growth in work-based learning and apprenticeships

Increased focus on data-informed learner support

Expansion of reskilling and upskilling provision for adults

Digitalisation, AI, green skills and continuous workforce development are significant themes influencing future workforce demand.

5 SECTOR GROWTH OR DECLINE

GROWTH FACTORS

- ✓ Continued demand for lifelong learning
- ✓ Increasing need for workforce upskilling and reskilling
- ✓ Expansion of apprenticeship pathways
- ✓ Greater focus on employability services
- ✓ Digital learning growth

CHALLENGES

- ✗ Public sector budget pressures
- ✗ Recruitment and retention of skilled staff
- ✗ Need for continual updating of workforce skills

Many organisations expect an ongoing need to upskill staff as workforce requirements evolve.
